

For immediate release
May 22, 2019

By Sean Andres
seaneandres@gmail.com

Supero Heroines, Etc. launches new activism program
Local non-profit wants to make social change using nerdy fandoms

Cincinnati, OH – The Cincinnati chapter of Super Heroines, Etc. (“SHE”) is starting a new program called Agents of Change. The first meeting will be held at the Center for Great Neighborhoods of Covington on Thursday, June 13, 2019, from 6 PM – 8 PM.

SHE wants you to use your superpowers for good. Women, genderqueer, and allies are invited to join the alliance of the greatest super heroines in the universe and become an Agent of Change. Whether you’re an expert in social justice or looking for a place to start, Agents of Change will support you in using the power of fandom for positive change.

Meetings are structured to give attendees information on an important cause or issue in the geek community with a direct call for action every time! Projects can range from a single activity or long term based on your interest level. No matter what, you will always walk away with an opportunity to make a difference immediately.

At the first meeting of Agents of Change on June 13, participants will gather ideas for topics to learn more about and plan structure and content for the meetings. Participants will vote to find the top issues to tackle, then start inviting experts from the community to share information with the group. SHE hopes to see you there as for the launch of this exciting new program!

“We are excited to share that we will have representatives from Give Back Cincinnati and FUEL NKU to talk about local issues where our group can make an impact!” says founder and Executive Director of SHE, Carolyn Noe. FUEL NKU will be on hand to discuss food insecurity in the student population and how you can help. Give Back Cincinnati will be there to discuss future volunteer opportunities for getting involved in your community.

The Center for Great Neighborhoods of Covington is located at 321 W. MLK/12th Street, Covington, Kentucky 41011. You can respond and share on SHE’s Facebook page.

###

About Super Heroines, Etc.

Super Heroines, Etc. is a non-profit organization using the power of fandom to fight for equity and representation. Local chapters gather superheroines together in safe environments for empowering events and creative change in their communities. In addition, SHE attends local, regional and national conventions to discuss representation in media and through the Agents of Change program, SHE provides tools and support for superheroines to be agents of positive change and create movement toward a more inclusive and equitable social transformation. For more information, please visit superheroesetc.org.

Contact Super Heroines, Etc.

Carolyn Noe, carolyn@superheroesetc.org